Details: The camp is located south of 15,000 ft. Kamen volcano, and north of a large federal wildlife preserve. The preserve provides a constant supply of trophy bears. Bear hunt in the fall season is conducted by spot and stalk over blueberry patches, dwarf pine thickets, reach in pine nuts and salmon streams. During this time of the year, bears are so preoccupied with eating that often they allow hunters to come within 50-100 yards. Hunters should expect to spend 2-3 days at a time away from the base camp, staying overnight in hunting tents or shacks. Rains are common, sometimes keeping hunters inside of cabins for a few days.
